Application Process

Applicants can apply here on our guildbase.gg website, using the "apply now" link.

If your application is accepted for further review, you will receive a guest invitation to our Discord server for ease of communication. Please change your nickname for our server to match your main character's name.

Once an application is submitted the guild members will make comments of their experiences and impression of that character. After the initial consideration phase is over the application will be either accepted or declined. If the application is accepted the applicant will be invited as a "trial" member to the guild. During the trial period the recruit will be expected to achieve a raid attendance percentage of 50% and will be evaluated on their general fit in the guild and knowledge of their class. Guild credit during trial is earned as a normal member, however they will only be permitted to bid when all present full members pass on the item.

A guild trial will last generally 30 days, if the recruit is not accepted to the guild by the time the trial period has ended they will be removed from the guild at that time (based on the guild leader or administrative/recruitment officer discretion). They may however apply once again if in the future they can meet the guild's expectations.
